Darling Joe: —

Overlook the stationery. I really hate to use it but have nothing else at present. Have just returned from lunch. This evening one of the girls from college will be down, — and that means I shan't have much time to write when once I get home.

Last night Sadie, Anna Weinstein and myself went out to a little home party at the home of a friend of Anna's. We certainly had a fine time. I spent a great deal of the evening admiring her home — and her little daughter, who is the most brilliant child I have ever seen. Only two years old, but you should hear her talk! — I fairly kissed her to death. Both parents of were teachers — or rather, the father still teaches so perhaps its not a be wondered at — but she certainly is a marvel. We laughed so — when, one of the young men found that I was at Bellevue, naturally thinking I must be a nurse asked me in what ward — so I told him in the "alcoholic and insane." You would have enjoyed the expression of surprise on his face! He asked later if he could come down to the dispensary since he works on 14th St. and I put on a serious face and told him "my no, I doesn't have any visitors." Finally he decided he'd have to break a leg — but I shook my head and told him he would find himself in the hospital and not in the dispensary!

Waited for the mail carrier as usual this morning — but there was no mail from you, can hardly wait until I reach home this evening. Will write a big fat letter to-morrow. How did the Goldberger fellow act?

With all my love to my darling sweet-heart, I'll close —

Lovingly
Frances.

Hope I find your picture home to-night — was disappointed over it yesterday, sweetheart mine.
